Proposition R Audit Squeaky Clean

Sue Rearic, Vice Chancellor Business Services, reported to the Governing Board that the required audit of Proposition R funds resulted in the program's eighth clean audit. A new requirement this year is preparation of a Communications Report to ensure that District management and Governing Board members receive information regarding the scope and results of the Proposition R audit to assist them in overseeing the financial reporting and disclosure processes.

The audit and all reports were prepared by the certified public accounting firm of Vicenti, Lloyd, Stutzman, LLP. The reports are now available on the District website.

Chancellor Miles continued the conga line tradition of announcing the award to the recipient in their department among colleagues, calling this conga line the best one yet with plenty of noisemakers, confetti, and colleagues celebrating McCoy's recognition.

Gafcon Construction Report

Gafcon Project Manager Jim Davies presented the semi-annual construction report to the Governing Board.

Recent rainstorms caused delays in construction on the Grossmont College Griffin Center/Student and Administrative Services project and the Cuyamaca College Learning Resource Center (LRC). Davies said the LRC will be open by the beginning of the spring semester, and work will be caught up at Grossmont. The new Grossmont College Health and Sciences Complex had some leaks, but most have been mitigated. Trustee Greg Barr asked who would fund repairs. Davies said the cause is being investigated and that it is too early to say how the repairs will be funded until the investigation is completed.

Davies said that thanks to aggressive outreach efforts, $35M (17.7%) in contracts from Proposition R construction went to local contractors. Another 4% went to Disabled Veterans Business Enterprises.

Trustee Mary Kay Rosinski asked whether change orders for construction remain at the 1% level. Davies said they are at 1% or less for the Cuyamaca College LRC, and that he will obtain the percentage for the Grossmont College Griffin Center/Student and Administrative Services project.

Davies told Board members that changes to the new state law regarding labor compliance should not effect the District's projects.
